Fighting for the health of people and planet with every tree

From twisted old yews and towering ancient oaks to delicate new saplings, we love trees and all the benefits they bring. And as the UK's largest woodland conservation charity, we're fighting for their future. Since 1972, we've planted more than 50 million trees, and we aren't stopping there.

We protect trees in trouble

We give a voice to woods and trees under threat from development, disease and climate change. In the last decade alone, we've saved more than 1,000 woods in trouble.

We restore ancient woodland

Just 2.5% of the UK's ancient woodland remains standing, so we're bringing thousands of hectares of ancient woodland back to life by removing non-native trees, letting the light in, and encouraging plants, animals and native trees to return.

We create thriving woods

We're on our way to establishing 60,000 hectares of healthy native woodland by 2030 and are planting 10 million trees outside of woods – that includes urban areas most in need of trees.

You can help us do even more

We want a world where woods and trees thrive for people and nature, but we can't get there on our own. You can make a difference – visit woodlandtrust.org.uk to find out how.
